

BUTTON BUTTON WHO'S GOT THE BUTTON

An old fashioned game for 3 or more people.

What you need to play:

A button, coin or token that you can hide easily in your hands.

How to play:

1. Stand in a circle with one player in the middle.
2. Every person holds their hands out in front of them with their palms together. One person in the circle has the button between their closed hands.
3. Everyone else in the circle holds their hands in the same way, so the person in the middle can't tell who has the button.
4. The people in the circle pass the button around. If you don't have the button, pretend to pass something like you did. If you have the button you can pretend to pass it to someone, and then pass it to someone else.
5. After a few "passes" have been made everyone in the circle chants "Button, Button Who's Got the Button," and the child in the middle guesses who has the button. Passing can continue while they guess.
6. Once the button has been found the child that was holding it switches with the person in the middle. The new person in the circle starts the button.
